FINAL EXAM: 12/8, 12pm

ASSIGNMENTS: There will be spot quizzes on the readings, exams on the Romantic and Victorian periods, and a final exam covering all three periods studied. You are responsible for two papers, one on a work from the Romantic Period, and the second on a work from either the Victorian or Modern Period. The papers should be five or more pages long and follow MLA guidelines or those given in your Freshman writing handbooks for citations and Works Cited pages. The topics are open and can be taken from anything we read or discuss in class, or from “Explorations” in the online Norton. The topic must be cleared with me at least one week in advance of the due date; length of the papers should be appropriate to the topic and argument, though four pages are usually too few and ten too many. N.B. All papers should include a works cited page and at least two secondary sources; all web sources must be from vetted sites or refereed electronic journals (JSTOR, etc.). Most secondary works should be in hand by the time you discuss your topic with me. If you or I am not happy with your first paper, you will have one week to revise it for a change of grade.

GRADES: Do not confuse the class with the course! You are responsible for the works assigned on the syllabus, and not only those works discussed in class. The exams are worth 10 points each (20 points), the final exam is worth 25 points, and the papers are worth 25 points each. Quizzes, attendance, and class participation make up the rest. Three unexcused absences are grounds for dismissal from the course.

PAPERS: I encourage you to discuss your papers with your classmates and anyone else you want to, including the Writing Center (2nd floor, Greenlaw Hall). The crucial thing to remember is that you must give citations for ideas and words that are not your own. The honor code is in effect in this class.
